

Abstract

The present invention relates to a method for treating a crystal with a solution, wherein the solution contains one or more molecule species and wherein the molecules of the molecule species typically have a molecular weight of < 500 Da. By means of this method, small molecules or molecule fragments weakly binding on target structures can be identified and their binding position can be determined by means of subsequent X-ray crystallographic examinations.

2350537
020306